Mommy, it happened again!

Sunday, October 21, 2012

That was the screech from the nursery that sent me running to my toddler's room 37 years ago. I found her holding back the curtain and excitedly shouting "The sun came back!"

Such is the wonder of an almost 3 year old who suddenly realizes each day is a new beginning. Today is the first day of the rest of your life is a cliché, but true nonetheless.

What about last week?

Did we make good choices? Did life interfere with our plans?

It really doesn't matter now. Today we begin a new day and new week.

Here's the choice. Look forward with hope and stay on the right track or fall back into old destructive habits. I don't want to retrace my steps and go backwards. I know where that leads and I didn't like it there.

So, as I watch the sun rise over the lake, I wish you all a good day and the resolve to make it a good week.

Good morning to you as well. I missed the sunrise up here in the north country, but your blog is a beautiful reminder that each day is a gift. There is no going backward.

I love your fresh and positive approach to life! And I get such a kick out of little kids and the purity of their responses to the world around them. Great story.

A simply sweet perspective from a three year old. There are no "do overs", but every day brings a "try again". Great reminder, thanks!
