The Spark Effect - My Multitasking Blog

Wednesday, January 06, 2016

DH & I are getting on the road soon for a 6 hour drive to North Carolina. We have an event there at 5:30 (a special dinner).

My computer is very slow right now. DH is downloading something and satellite access out here in the country isn't great in the best of times. Pages are loading slowly.

Still Spark is what I do every morning, right after my daily weigh-in and getting my coffee (which DH has made every morning for our nearly 49 years of marriage.)

So between checking in on Spark Friends and spinning the wheel (520 day login streak) I'm folding laundry. I can get 2 to 3 pieces done while waiting for my computer to catch up with me.

In the past I would have simply growled at the screen as my annoyance grew. After grabbing what I need from the dryer, the rest of the clothes would have been left in a heap.

Now everything is ready to be put away. I think I'll do that before getting in the car.

Good day to all Sparkers!

We learn to work with our greatest weaknesses and irritations. That's all part of the journey, methinks. It sounds like you're conquering many aspects of your life. Nice that your hubby has made coffee for you for every single day of your married life. That's an amazing streak of its own! A very sweet gesture.

Safe travels.

All the best, B_B,

Nu

Have a safe trip. I grew up in Western NC. That is so sweet that your DH takes care of your coffee.

I will assume you are on the road now, so will send safe travel energy your way.... Great job multi-tasking! I need to take some lessons from you instead of allowing myself to get angry when the computer runs too slowly! Thanks for the tip!!

The thing that made me decide I had to lose weight was when I sat down to fill out a form, realized I didn't have a pen. Caught myself huffing as if getting up was the biggest inconvenience. Thought When did this happen to me? So much more product sounds like a good start to the day! my DH prepares my coffee for me to push the button (i have been known to do weird things to coffee machines before i have my coffee, like not put the receptacle under the spout:-). i know what you mean about rural satellite internet connections! btw, i ate very well in durham - DS carefully searched out restaurants with vegan options for DD and me when we visited. so NC does have some good healthy food options to offer! travel safe!
