“It’s happening again” said the Stealth Sparker (aka my DH)

Tuesday, March 09, 2021

After 57 years of the shared history (54 married), I didn’t even have to ask what it was.

He was remembering “Mommy, it happened again! “

That was the screech from the nursery that sent me running to my toddler’s room 45 years ago. I found her holding back the curtain and excitedly shouting “The sun came back!”

Such is the wonder of an almost 3 year old who suddenly realizes each day is a new beginning. Today is the first day of the rest of your life is a cliché, but true nonetheless.

What about yesterday? Last week? Last month?
 Did we make good choices? Did life interfere with our plans?
 How did we react to that?
 It really doesn’t matter now.

The past year has been challenging, for some more than for others.
 All I really had to do was stay home and live in my comfortable hermitage.
 Others have had to deal with much, much more.

Today we begin a new day and are approaching a season of renewal and rebirth.

Here’s the choice. Look forward with hope and stay on the right track or fall back into old destructive habits. I don’t want to retrace my steps and go backwards. I know where that leads and I did not like it there.

So, as I watch the sun rise over the lake, I wish you all a good day and the resolve to renew your goals.

Great blog! Aren't children marvellous with their comments!? At four, I told a mum's friend that her husband must have got her secondhand because she was married for the second time.... cue hysterical laughter from the assembled ladies....

I was saying to myself this AM when I got up: "this is the first day of the rest of your life, choose wisely" and then I saw your blog. What a great reinforcement I have been struggling with eating healthy and portion control all week and your blog has given me a GREAT boost of determination. Thanks for sharing!!

I agree I love a new day, perhaps I don't want to get up when my hubby says its time but always do and am grateful for it. We stayed in a hotel once next to a lake and I was so excited every morning to look out on the water but my hubby said things would have gone terribly wrong if it wasn't there but I liked to be excited like your daughter, perhaps I should be more excited on a daily basis. thanks for posting this and

My husband and I are very lucky that we got to stay home well he had to go to work but for the majority we stayed home and we had no problem paying bills, mortgage or anything like that. I am glad for you and you are so lucky to have a daughter! I have four sons! I would of loved to have one more and have a daughter like you. She said the most adorable thing and very wise that the sun came up again. We should all be that excited to see that.

It is such a joy to see the world through the eyes of a child. We forget the wonder of it all and it's good to take the time to remember it.

Not knowing this line it seems that it was the way I lived last year. We are very lucky and basically weren't affected by Covid. Sure we couldn't go out to eat (no biggie) and had to skip movies, theater, galleries....again no biggie. the biggie is that we had enough to eat, money to support ourselves, our health, our family and zooming with friends. Maybe that helped? After years of up and down weight this time I'm bound and determined to keep it off AND stay healthy!

We are doing it!

Children can approach life with such awe and wonder. Too many of us lose that too soon. I choose to encourage that sense of wonder at the marvels of God's creation.

Yes the sunshine has such a healing effort on our moods and our well-being. When we go through patches of depression, it is usually when the sun is absent from my day. Thanks for the reminder to appreciate the sunny days in our lives.
